They are much better than the Chinese off-brands usually installed in LCD TVs. When you install the replacement capacitor, make sure the polarity band goes in the same way as the original (the board is probably marked to show which way), and use lead-free electronic solder with an iron that gets hot enough for it.

I've just bought LT27HVX from Office Depot on 12/11/05. It was $599 (with $200 mail in rebate). I am really impressed with its quality, the colors are really bright compared to other LCD TVs at about the same price. Previously I bought Olevia LT27HVS but it had terrible colors and problem with its brightness.
